About USAEE

The United States Association for Energy Economics (USAEE) is a premier organization dedicated to promoting the profession of energy economics and policy. Founded in 1984, the USAEE has grown to become the largest affiliate of the International Association for Energy Economics (IAEE). For nearly four decades, the USAEE has been at the forefront of energy-related discussions, bringing together professionals from academia, government, and industry to address the complex challenges facing the energy sector.

With a diverse membership of more than 300 energy professionals, the USAEE provides a unique platform for networking, knowledge exchange, and professional development. Members benefit from access to cutting-edge research, conferences, webinars, and publications that cover a wide range of topics, including renewable energy, oil and gas markets, electricity policy, and environmental economics. The association's commitment to fostering dialogue and collaboration has made it an indispensable resource for anyone involved in energy economics and policy.

The USAEE's impact extends beyond the national level through its network of regional chapters, which organize local events, workshops, and networking opportunities, allowing members to engage with energy issues relevant to their specific regions. Additionally, the USAEE's strong connection to the IAEE provides members with a global perspective on energy economics, facilitating international collaboration and knowledge sharing. By supporting the USAEE, sponsors contribute to the advancement of energy economics education, research, and policy development, playing a crucial role in shaping the future of the energy industry.

SPONSORSHIP BENEFITS
